

Tom McGowan is a third year Choral Scholar and music student at Christ Church, Oxford. Originally from London, Tom's singing career began as a treble at St. Mary's, Barnes under the direction of Daniel Turner. In 2013, Tom started at St. Paul's School where he further developed his singing as a baritone, regularly performing in recitals and as a soloist in larger orchestral works as well as taking on leading roles in Musicals. Since arriving at Christ Church in 2018, Tom has been learning under Bronwen Mills. As a keen solo singer, Tom has performed lunchtime recitals across Oxford, as well as performing in a full operatic production with New Chamber Opera under the direction of Michael Burden. Tom has participated in multiple concerts with the Cathedral Choir, singing at prestigious venues such as St John Smith's Square and Syon House. In 2019, Tom was appointed joint director of Christ Church college choir.
