

Elizabeth Vineall is in her fourth year studying German and Linguistics at the Queen's College. She recently returned from her year abroad in Munich, where she studied with Julian Prégardien at the Hochschule für Musik und Theater München.

Lizi first came to music through the cello, playing in orchestras and chamber groups in and outside of school, including a solo performance of Bruch's Kol Nidrei at St John's Smith Square in 2018. Lizi started singing lessons at eleven, and sang in various choirs and smaller ensembles through school. In Oxford Lizi sings regular services as a choral scholar in Queen's College chapel choir, alongside services with the Magdalen Consort of Voices. She is currently learning with Carys Lane and Giles Underwood.
