

Hailing from Lisburn, Northern Ireland, British/Irish tenor Aidan MacLean is an undergraduate studying Music at Magdalen College, University of Oxford. He is a student of Giles Underwood and has delivered recitals at both Magdalen College and Pembroke College. He is an Academical Clerk with the Choir of Magdalen College, recently being promoted to Head Clerk - a move up from his painstaking tenure as Choir Librarian... Before studying at Oxford, Aidan sang with the Choir of St. Polycarp's Parish Choir, Belfast, where he was also Head Chorister. Outside of solo and ensemble singing, Aidan is involved with vocal free improvisation and is a singing/songwriting. He is also a composer, and has written works for the Choir of Magdalen College, Chamber Choir Ireland, and the ORA Singers. Aidan also has an interest in medicine and laryngology, and has been shadowing ENT Consultant Mr. Declan Costello, as well as working with the 'Shout at Cancer' choir of laryngectomy patients led by Dr. Thomas Moors. He plans to study Medicine as a postgraduate.
